Discovery Analytics Administrator Mallory Acheson Achieved Brainspace Analyst Certification

Mallory Acheson, a discovery analytics administrator for Nelson Mullins Encompass, recently underwent training to complete her Brainspace Analyst Certification. A member of the Tennessee Bar, Acheson has spent the past four years consulting on a variety of discovery issues. Her Brainspace certification augments her ability to help clients with e-discovery efficiently and thoroughly.

Brainspace is a Cyxtera company focused on artificial intelligence, and its focus is to advance analytics for companies such as Deloitte, KPMG, and LexisNexis. To achieve certification as a Brainspace Analyst, Acheson underwent classes including 24 modules, 100 videos, hands-on exercises, and quizzes. The class culminated in a two-part certification exam with 60 multiple choice questions and a hands-on workflow exam.

Nelson Mullins Encompass is a division of Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough LLP. Established in 2007, Encompass provides clients facing significant litigation, government investigations, and transactions with end-to-end e-discovery technology, document review, and integrated counsel and advocacy.
